Respect & Responsibility

August & September 2018

Noah has been so responsible with learning kindergarten rules and procedures and consistently following them. He is a respectful listener to teachers and students in the classroom and on the playground. He is a wonderful role model for his kindergarten friends and it is such a pleasure having Noah on our kindergarten team!

~Ms. A

Emma is always acting like a star student. She not only follows the classroom rules but is a role model on the playground as well. She constantly looks for opportunities to be respectful to adults and takes care of her responsibilities in the classroom.

~Mrs. Koester

Our respectful and responsible student is Chloe. She is often a role model in class for other students to look at to see how to behave. She follows directions the first time asked, she quietly waits for the next directions, and she does her best inside and outside of the classroom.

~Mrs. Hill

Cora comes every week checked out head to toe in yellow for wear it Wednesday. She not only shows respect and responsibility with what she wears, but how she acts. Her peers note her as an example of respect and responsibility because of how hard she works on all of her assignments and how well she treats her friends in class.

~ Ms. Worley

Kylie has shown respect to her teachers and classmates on a daily basis. She has demonstrated the trait of responsibility by turning in all of her assignments on time and completed with her best effort. What a great start to the school year!

~Mrs. Ruley

Marley is always a true example of respect and responsibility. She is a wonderful listener, attentive to the moment's focus, and exudes kindness and calm to any situation that she is a part of. In the classroom, Marley goes above and beyond to make certain that she is clear of the instructions, expectations, and materials needed to complete the work. She consistently keeps up with her responsibilities, and to top it off, she does this all with a beautiful smile and positive attitude!

~Mrs. Arnone

Andrew comes to school every day setting an example for his peers of what respect and responsibility looks like at Nord Country School. Whether in the classroom or elsewhere on campus, he treats everyone the way he would want to be treated and follows directions carefully. Andrew starts his morning with being respectful at assembly and continues throughout each day as a role model in our classroom.

~Ms. Cervantes

The student who best exemplified the character traits of respect and responsibility is Sean. In our class he is usually pretty quiet, often choosing his words carefully and speaking in a respectful manner. He also does a good job of keeping track of his belongings and staying on top of his assignments. Congratulations.

~Mr. Rosso

Isaac is new to our school, but he is definitely making a positive impact on his peers in the few months he has been here. Isaac shows responsibility daily by always being prepared for class and also by being the first student to help clean up sports equipment and other school materials. Isaac's respect for his fellow students is apparent as he is patient, kind and respectful of others opinions and ideas. Great job Isaac!
